How Will Changes in Oregon Individual Market Subsidies Impact the Individual and Oregon Employer Group Market? Consumers will see the costs of premiums rise next year due to the scheduled expiration

Dec. 31, 2025, unless Congress acts to reauthorize them. Without reauthorization of the subsidies, people who buy their own health coverage through the federal marketplace will receive smaller tax credits to lower their monthly premiums. For some households, especially those in middle-income brackets or in rural parts of the state, this may translate into substantial increases in premiums and out-of-pocket costs.

of federal Affordable Care Act tax subsidies that helped offset costs for many Oregonians. Those expanded subsidies, known as Enhanced Premium Tax Credits, will expire on (about 126,000 as of the end of the second quarter this year) will see increases, some as much as 300 percent to 400 percent. Oregon currently has about 220,000-230,000 people enrolled in marketplace (on-exchange) CMS 2025 Open Enrollment data.

Although this federal change is beyond the state's control, Oregon anticipates that most who buy plans from the marketplace

National modeling shows about 13% of individual market enrollees would move to employer-sponsored (group) plans if the enhanced subsidies expire.

coverage. Based on Urban Institute and KFF modeling, Oregon would likely see something like:

Estimated Impact (Oregon)

13% of ~225,000 Oregonians ≈ 29,000 to 30,000 people who are expected to leave the individual ACA market and shift to group

Move from ACA to employer group plans ≈ 30,000 people

Outcome

≈ 15,000-20,000 Become uninsured Remain on ACA but pay more ≈ 150,000+ Shift to off-exchange individual plans Small (under 10k) If the enhanced ACA subsidies expire in 2026, roughly 30,000 Oregonians could be expected to exit the individual market and shift into Employer group coverage.

The Great Stuffing Debate - Inside or Outside the Bird?

Contaminated animal juices containing these germs may seep into the stuffing, where However, the arguments for cooking the stuffing inside the bird are simple.

According to The Fact Site, Why Isn't Stuffing Put Inside the Thanksgiving Turkey? - The

As much as we love Thanksgiving stuffing, health experts warn that we shouldn't put the stuffing inside the turkey because sometimes, raw turkey can contain potentially harmful they might survive the cooking process. Poorly cooked poultry and stuffing could make Stuffing involves a flavor exchange which improves the flavor of the food. For example, in stuffed poultry, the meat juices seep into the stuffing, while the herbs, veggies, and spices infuse the meat with a richer flavor. Stuffing meat also helps prevent it from drying out. It acts like a barrier that stops moisture from evaporating too quickly, which can be a real help when you're cooking something large like the Thanksgiving turkey.

So, how can you safely cook Thanksgiving stuffing inside the turkey? The United States Department of Agriculture has shared

1. Precook ingredients that will be going into the stuffing. Then, prepare your stuffing as usual and store it in your refrigerator if you're not ready to use it immediately.

Happy, Healthy and Delicious Thanksgiving!

- 2. While stuffing your turkey, don't overfill its cavity. Instead, you want to leave room for heat to circulate better.
- 3. Use a meat thermometer. Remember the magic number 165 °F (73.9 °C). That's how hot you want the turkey's internal temperature to be.

4. Once your Thanksgiving turkey is cooked, let it rest a bit before carving. If you want to be extra careful, you can take out the stuffing and allow it to sit in the oven a bit longer. So ultimately, the choice is yours. You can either cook the stuffing separately or monitor the internal temperature of the turkey.
