Get to Know the Health Coaching Program

If you ask people who have made lifestyle changes how they did it, many say the same thing: They had support. While support can come from family, friends and others, sometimes the help of a health coach can make all the difference.

Personalized support

Working one-on-one with a health coach, you'll:

- learn what to expect when trying to make a change;
- think about what motivates you and why you're ready for this program;
- decide exactly what you want to focus on;
- set your specific goals; and
- track your progress – Your coach will help you stay with it.

How the program works

- You'll start with an open conversation with your coach. You'll learn about each other, and you can ask questions about how your coach likes to work.
- Next, your coach will ask some questions about your health and routine.
- Then, together you'll set some goals.
- Your coach will help you stay on track with your goals and reassess them along the way.

- You will have a scheduled call once a month for the length of the program with your coach, and you can call or write a secure email to your coach anytime you like.

Some of the health behaviors you can address with your health coach include:

- maintaining a healthy weight and body mass index (BMI);
- smoking or tobacco cessation;
- increasing your physical activity;
- making healthier food and nutrition choices; and
- learning to manage stress.

Anytime access

You can connect with the program online, which means you and your coach can discuss personalized health information in real time, when it matters most. You'll also access several coaching tools and goal-setting resources, like exercise and food trackers – anytime, day or night.
